DAF YOMI⁴ KIDS

Inside the Daf

If an ארוסה marries and divorces even a hundred men after she makes a vow, only the last husband may help revoke her vows.

We have learned that the vows of an ארוסה (woman who performed אירוסין but not נשואין) must be revoked by both her father and her husband on the very day they hear of it.

We also learned that if the father died, her husband alone cannot revoke her vows.

What happens if an ארוסה makes a vow, gets divorced from her husband, and marries another man, all on the same day? Which husband has the power to revoke her vows?

WORD OF THE DAY:

נָמִי

"ALSO"

The משנה says her second husband along with her father will have the power to revoke her vows. In fact, the משנה says even if she would perform אירוסין and divorce a hundred husbands, the last husband is the one who shares the power to revoke her vows.

The גמרא explains the source for this law. In the Torah section about revoking vows, it says that her vows may be revoked "If she shall surely be to a man and her vows are upon her" (see במדבר לז, Num. 30,7).

From that פסוק (verse) it sounds like her vows were already "upon her" even before she got married. And, still, the "man" (her husband) can play a part in revoking her vows.

Divorce and Vows

The husband of an ארוסה wife (woman who performed אירוסין but not נשואין) may take a part in revoking his wife's vows. But he can also confirm her vow which would mean she would have to keep her vow.

like he was silent?

On the one hand, a divorce can be like the husband is confirming the vow since he knows that after the divorce he will not be able to revoke the vow anymore.

The גמרא asks about divorce. If an ארוסה makes a vow and her husband divorces her that same day, what happens to her vow? Is the divorce like confirming the vow or is it

On the other hand, divorce may be like the husband is keeping silent since he never said anything.

Did You Know...

When a young girl leaves her father's house, the משנה calls it "going out into her own domain."

A מידות Moment

"Did you clear the table?" asked Yoni's mother.

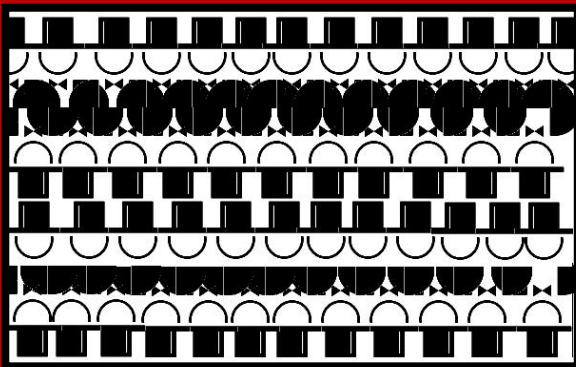

"No," said Yoni. "I didn't know you wanted me to."

"I told you to 'clean up,'" said his mother.

"Ima," said Yoni, "Could you please be more clear about what you want next time? I learned in daf yomi about what can happen if your intentions are not made clear; after a divorce we are unsure if the wife's vows are still in effect. It's important to be clear about what you mean."
