Inside the Daf

tithes (תרומה)

Once יבום (levirate marriage) is performed, the surviving brother and widow are fully married.

רב says that if the surviving brother is a כהן she may eat תרומה, the special portion of food that only a כהן and his family may eat, as soon as יבום is performed.

Being fully married also means that the brother can inherit his dead brother's money and property.

Also, if he dies, the widow may remarry just as she would be able to if a normal marriage had taken place. Similarly, if the man divorced her after יבום was done, she may remarry just like she would be able to remarry after being divorced from a man she was fully married to.

After divorce or her husband's death, she would not have to perform חליצה.

A Moment

The class debate was getting heated. Raymond was getting frustrated because Avi was always interrupting him before he was finished making his argument! This made Raymond feel rushed and he began to stutter and not argue as well as he could have.

"Let Raymond finish what he has to say before arguing with him, Avi," said Rabbi Karanofski. "רב נתיב would let the Sages finish what they had to say before arguing with them!"

No תרומה for Them!

כהנים are entitled to special portions of food from the Jewish community called, "תרומה." The כהן's family may eat תרומה, too, including his wife. This is true even if his wife is not a כהן.

A כהן is not allowed to marry a divorced woman or a woman who has performed חליצה. A כהן גדול also may not marry a widow.

What if a כהן went ahead and married a divorced woman or one who performed חליצה? May she eat תרומה as his wife?

The answer is no. By marrying a forbidden woman, the כהן makes her a חללה ("profaned woman"). A חללה may not eat תרומה.

But what if she was the daughter of a כהן and was already eating תרומה as part of her father's family before she was married?

תנא קמא says as soon as the first part of marriage is done, when the groom gives her a ring for marriage, she may not eat תרומה since she is a חללה. רבי שמעון and רבי אלעזר say she would still be able to eat the תרומה of her father since she is not fully married to the כהן.

Did You Know...

רבי נתן would let the Sages finish their statement, and only then would he argue with them!
